EVERYONE GETS INTO THE ACT AT SF FAIR SEPTEMBER 6–9

Think back to the county fairs of your childhood: 4-H Club exhibits, cotton candy, quilts, apple pie judging, and tractor pulling contests. Now think again: imagine fine international cuisine, Cantonese opera, reggae music, vaudeville, and, instead of a hog-calling contest, a fog-calling contest! This eclectic blend is just a small sample of what's in store at San Francisco's Urban County Fair—it's city life in microcosm, including everything that makes San Francisco a delightful and desirable place to call home.

"The arts are a major focus this year, much more so than in the past. Hopefully, people will get a real sense of what is happening in San Francisco's performing arts community," according to Bob Martin, entertainment coordinator for the Fair. This emphasis is preeminent in the Arts Pavilion in Pier 3, organized by seven local performing arts groups. Here you can literally be backstage and see how the creative process happens. Audiences can learn the proper way to put on a toe shoe, how to operate video equipment, and the tricks of applying stage makeup. Many Bay Area performing arts groups have booths with representatives to answer questions and distribute information about programs and upcoming performances.

Also in Pier 3 is an unusual commissioned work by Antennae Theater, titled Fairplay. Would-be thespians are invited to join in the action on 30 different sets depicting scenes from California history and life in San Francisco.

Walk onto each set and see clippings of an historical event or listen to pre-recorded tapes on a Walkman. Costumes are ready—so put on a feather boa and hear the voice of Carol Doda telling you how to do a striptease in a club on Broadway. Change to a kimono, participate in a tea ceremony, and learn about the internment of the Japanese during World War II. Aging hippies can once again dance in the Avalon ballroom, while diplomats reenact the signing of the UN Charter in San Francisco. Be a gold-miner, a fireman during the 1906 Earthquake, a low-rider, a prisoner at Alcatraz, a cable-car operator, or act out a scene from a famous movie made in San Francisco. It's an opportunity to let your hair down and do all those things you've always wanted to do. There's a little bit of Walter Mitty in all of us.

Outside, roving vaudeville acts and circus companies have a rare opportunity to perform together. Two outside stages feature ongoing dance, theater, and music from folk to reggae. At the contest stage in Pier 2, watch the "Muni Motion" dance contest, the first San Francisco Joke-Off, the KSOL Rappin' contest, to name just a few.

FROM PUPPETS TO OPERA

This year's Fair features a Chinese-American performing arts festival which showcases Cantonese opera, bilingual puppet shows, and folk and contemporary dance and music, coordinated by Pear Garden in the West.

The puppet show—which marks the debut of Asian American Theater Company's new puppet troupe—is based on three Chinese folk tales: The Giant Lotus Blossom, Weighing the Elephant, and The Boy in the Moon. This is the first of several programs designed for the immigrant Asian communities in the Bay Area. The bilingual format is designed to provide a means for non-Asian audiences as well as immigrant communities to learn about and enjoy eastern culture. As Dom Magwili of AATC says, "When you affirm an immigrant's first language, as well as their stories and culture, you also affirm them as a people."

Traditional Chinese Opera has been performed in San Francisco for 131 years, but has been somewhat neglected since the early 1960's. The cameo pieces prepared for this year's Fair begin a revival planned by Pear Garden which will include traditional styles and a much expanded and modernized repertoire in the future.

Other groups, like Flowing Stream Ensemble, Paper Angels Productions, and Tsai Hung Dance Company, round out the agenda with music, dance, and dramatic performances.

CRAFTS, CULTURE, AND CALAMARI

The booths have always been a significant part of the San Francisco Fair. Buy an unusual objet d'art, find out how to enroll your child in summer school, taste an exotic treat, or learn about postal fraud at the many sales and informational booths at the Fair.

Hundreds of craftspeople sell handmade articles in Pier 3; demonstrators show you how to use the latest in kitchen gadgetry; specialty items like spices, futons, and satellite television are on hand; and representatives from health services, political groups and city agencies provide you with information.

San Francisco's neighborhood organizations deserve special recognition for the valuable services they provide to our City's youth, immigrants, seniors, disabled, and the various communities in which they operate. Services are showcased in the neighborhood booths, but you can also see informative skits, participate in games and activities, watch demonstrations, and find out about various community issues. Here is just a small sampling of outstanding organizations:

—RAP (Real Alternatives Program) Works to fight street violence in the Mission; sends teens into schools to talk about drug abuse.

—Independent Living Resource Center Provides low-cost care to disabled people; distributes assistant devices to those who cannot afford them.

—Tenderloin Neighborhood Development Corporation Buys multi-unit housing, refurbishes it, and works to move tenants toward cooperative management; has gained recognition for rooftop gardens project in San Francisco.

—Multi-Service Center for Koreans Provides English classes, job training and placement for Korean immigrants, and a summer camp for kids.

—Communities United Against Violence Works in high-crime areas to teach violence prevention, self-defence, block safety, and senior safety; began as a group to stop violence against gays.

And, finally, there's everyone's favorite activity—eating! Gastonomes and gourmets gather around to sample mouthwatering creations from many of the City's finest restaurants. The only problem with the food booths is deciding just what to eat. Calamari, Chinese chicken salad, chocolate, pasta, pot-stickers, pizza, tamales, tofu, tempura, hot dogs, hot pretzels, hot links—should I go on?

Over sixty restaurants, from the trendy Squids to the North Beach Restaurant, will compete to please your tastebuds in miniature kitchens between Buildings C and D. Just follow your nose, and turn left at the curry!

FMC UPDATE

San Francisco Blues Festival. Bonnie Raitt and the legendary John Lee Hooker headline the 13th Annual San Francisco Blues Festival, once again taking place on the Great Meadow at Upper Fort Mason. This two-day event, which runs from noon to 6pm on the weekend of September 14 and 15, boasts a splendid lineup of talent and history. Saturday's show includes Luther "Guitar Jr." Johnson, who has teamed with such venerables as Magic Sam, Muddy Waters, and Elmore James; Mississippi Johnny Waters and harmonica great Sammy Myers in a tribute to the rich sounds of the Mississippi delta region; and the versatile Raitt, widely considered to be the finest white female blues interpreter performing today. Sunday's show includes zydeco favorite Queen Ida, and three living legends: Hooker, Otis Rush, and Big Joe Turner. Vocalist Turner, now 72 years old, is one of American music's most important links to blues, jazz, and rock and roll, while Rush's Chicago blues style and Hooker's original boogie blues stand without question as pioneering influences. The National Blues Foundation recently honored the 68-year-old Hooker as Traditional Male Blues Artist of the Year. Tickets for the SFBF are available at all BASS outlets or may be charged over the phone by calling 762-BASS.

Museo ItaloAmericano. The art of puppet theater spans many centuries, and nowhere has puppetry flourished as it has in Italy. The popularity and significance of puppetry is evidenced in the more than 100 puppet theaters that existed in Sicily alone by the beginning of the 20th century. From September 11 to October 13, the Museo will present an exhibit of puppets and scenery from the collection of Vincenzo Abbate, director of the renowned Sicilian theater, Macri Acireale. Since the mid-17th century, notable puppet dramas have involved stories of the Crusades. These serialized epics, traditionally performed over many evenings, have been described as "tempestuous stories of love, hate, chivalry, and war." The puppets in this show date from the 18th and 19th centuries, stand four to five feet high, and are made of padded wood. Dressed in period costumes, most of which include armor, they have been collected from theaters throughout Sicily. Live demonstrations are being organized in conjunction with the exhibit. For more information and demonstration times, call 673-2200.

The World's Greatest Garage Sale. Fort Mason's 54,000-square-foot Pier 2 truly will become the world's biggest garage as radio station KYA and the City of Hope team up to put on this benefit sale of everything under the sun. Civic clubs, school groups, youth organizations, churches, artists, small and large businesses will sell their wares from display booths. A $1 donation is the shopper and junkophile's ticket to clothing, furniture, artwork, antiques, overstocked goods, and the unexpected. Live music and door prizes create a festive atmosphere. Sellers keep all profits for their own organizations while contributions and concession sales go to benefit the City of Hope's patient care, medical research, and public education programs. The sale runs from 9am to 6pm, both Saturday and Sunday, September 21 and 22. Call 981-HOPE for additional information.
